Software You can update to the latest Windows 10 using Microsoft.com/get/windows/upgrade. You need to confirm you are downloading the Windows 10 ISO file (not a Windows 10 version), and have USB flash drive ready to install from. Once you have a USB flash drive ready, simply download the Windows 10 ISO file (or Windows 10 version ISO file). Start the Windows 10 media creation tool (creating the Windows 10 ISO file is easy, though I would recommend reading the guide provided by Microsoft if you want to make your own ISO files or have another question), and select the ISO file you downloaded. Once the media creation tool starts up, click on the USB icon and select your USB drive. Once the program says that it's done (it will say "Done", then "installing" then "Windows 10 is ready to install"), just restart your computer and enter the Setup Assistant. As the last step, you will be able to install Windows 10 from within Windows 10 using an activation key, which can be used to activate a single copy of Windows 10. Removing Windows 10 or reinstalling Windows 10 If you are already running Windows 10 and wish to remove it, or you are reinstalling Windows 10, follow these steps: To remove Windows 10, uninstall it: On your computer, right-click on the Start button and select "Uninstall a program." Select "Programs and Features" from the left-hand menu. Select Windows 10 and click Uninstall. Then click on the OK button to confirm the removal of Windows 10. To reinstall Windows 10, follow these steps: On your computer, right-click on the Start button and select "Install Windows 10." Click on the "Download and install" option. When the setup starts, follow the prompts and when it says "Windows 10 is ready to install", select "Install". When the installation is done, click on the restart button, and you will see the welcome page of Windows 10. If the installation worked, there will be an option to select the "Refresh" button, which will allow you to access the Windows 10 Store and install apps (once Windows 10 has been activated). Using Windows 10 on multiple computers If you have two or more computers, you can make them both have Windows 10 by following these steps: On the 82157476af
